1. From 3 to 7 March 1954, map exercises involving about 50 high-ranking officers including several generals were held in the headquarters building of the Kavallerie Kaserne in Pasewalk. During these exercises, access was forbidden to the headquarters building.
2. From 23 to 27 March 1954, trucks carrying KVPs daily arrived at the Kavallerie Kaserne from a forest camp. The soldiers said that they had been absent from the post for more than eight weeks. After the return of these troops, the installation quartered an estimated 1,500 to 2,000 men. Most of the soldiers wore red-bordered black or yellow-bordered black collar patches. KVPs said that the installation quartered AT, AAA and signal units.
3. Since late March, numerous weapons including 37-mm and 76-mm AA guns, besides AT guns, presumably of 57-mm caliber, had been again stored in the Henschel depot.

Comment. The troops who returned to the installation in late March had presumably been rotated to the Stallberg area or the Jaegerbrueck training grounds. Troops permanently quartered in the Kavallerie Kaserne include the headquarters, the AAA regiment and the signal battalion of Corps North. The AT regiment is stationed at Stallberg. The information on weapons observed appears to be inaccurate.
